

AUGUST 2026

SỔ SẠCH

Vietnam abolished lump-sum tax for 5.2 million household businesses.
They must all keep books now. Almost none of them can.

A working instrument, an eleven-month head start,
and an open question about what it should become.

The customer acquisition was done by the state.

Date	What happened	Who it reaches
01/01/2026	lump-sum tax (thuế khoán) abolished — household businesses must self-declare on real books	5.2M
30/04/2026	first quarterly declaration filed under the new regime	all of them
31/01/2027	Q4 deadline — and then every quarter, permanently	all of them
2025–26	Decree 70/2025: e-invoicing from a connected register above 1 billion VND of revenue (now carried in Decree 254/2026, in force 01/07/2026)	the upper tier

- This is not a market that has to be persuaded. Five million businesses acquired a legal obligation on a fixed date, cannot meet it with a paper notebook, and are penalised for getting it wrong. Nobody has to be sold the problem.
- A filing habit forms once. Whoever is in the chat the first time a household actually has to file is the one they keep. That is the whole race, and it is running now.

Not a concept. You can open it while we talk.

- The product runs in production. A household photographs a receipt inside Zalo; the entry is written, the tax thresholds are watched, and the quarterly 01/CNKD declaration drafts itself.
- A verified Zalo Official Account. Eleven months, four rejections, a wet-sealed corporate filing and a Vietnamese company holding its own .com.vn domain. It is a licence, not a signup.
- Everything above is checkable without us. Open sosach.com.vn. Search the Official Account in Zalo. Look up enterprise code 0316904153 in the public register, and the domain at tracuutenmien.gov.vn.

What does not exist yet: paying customers. We would rather say that first than have you find it.

The things you only learn by shipping this.

Any team can read the same decrees. These are the parts that are not in them.

- Nobody photographs revenue. A café does not print a receipt for two hundred coffees. Photographs capture costs; sales arrive as one typed line at closing time. A product specified from the outside gets this exactly backwards, and then wonders why the books are empty on the income side.
- The threshold is invisible without a book. The household that crosses one billion VND without noticing is the one who gets hurt — and it cannot know, because not keeping books is the whole reason it is in this situation. Warning someone before the tax bites is worth more than filing for them after.
- Record how much to trust each figure, not just the figure. Every entry is tagged by where it came from — a photographed document, a typed daily total, a balance carried in from an old notebook. A pile of numbers is a subscription business. A provenance-weighted record of how micro-businesses actually trade is something a lender can underwrite, and nobody in this market is collecting it that way.
- This is a correctness product before it is a software product. The first real receipt we processed produced four different ways of being confidently wrong. All four were caught by tests before a single household saw them. In a category where the output is filed with the tax authority, that discipline is the product.

What a five per cent share looks like.

Not a forecast. Public segment size × the entry price — so you can form your own view.

Share of the addressable segment	Households	Revenue / year	USD
1%	18,000	14,9 tỷ VND	~$0.6M
3%	54,000	44,7 tỷ VND	~$1.8M
5%	90,000	74,5 tỷ VND	~$2.9M
10%	180,000	149,0 tỷ VND	~$5.8M

- The base is 1.8 million — smartphone-active household businesses with revenue between 200 million and 3 billion VND, where the filing duty is real and the ability to meet it is not. Against the full 5.2 million the same shares are roughly three times these lines.
- Priced at 69.000đ a month, and nothing else. No second tier, no services, no e-invoice revenue, no lending. Deliberately the most conservative line we can draw, because the interesting question is what the segment is worth at all — not what we can persuade you it is worth.
- Five per cent of this segment is a distribution problem, not a product one. The instrument exists. Ninety thousand households is not something a founder reaches by walking market streets — it is what a partner with a field force reaches, which is the entire reason for this conversation.

Separately, both of us are slower.

WHAT WE BRING

A working instrument against a statutory deadline. Eleven months of regulatory groundwork that cannot be compressed. A verified channel into the segment. And the product judgement above — learned by shipping to real households, not by reading the decrees.

WHAT A PARTNER BRINGS

Distribution at a scale we cannot buy: an existing base, a field force, branches, licences, and people these households already deal with. A Vietnamese ground team. And the balance sheet to treat a five-million-business segment as a programme rather than a pilot.

AND THE HONEST PART

The eleven months are a head start, not a wall. A Vietnamese incumbent can clear the same regulatory barrier — it would simply cost them the same eleven months, against a deadline that is already running. That is precisely why the head start is worth something now and worth less later. We would rather be straight about the shape of the advantage than oversell it.

We are not raising money.

We are trying to work out what this should become, and with whom.

WHAT WE ARE ASKING FOR TODAY

Nothing.

An hour, your reading of the segment, and whether you think this belongs inside a business like yours or alongside one.

WHAT COMES NEXT, IF IT IS INTERESTING

A mutual confidentiality agreement, then the operating detail: the economics, the channel, the scoring and provenance model, the risks, and what we would not do.

What it is worth is a later conversation. What it could do at scale is this one.
